Francis Bushman in a Scene from "Under Royal Patronage."

Probably there is no more enthusiastic motion picture actor in the world than Francis X. Bushman. He takes as much interest in the production of a new film as the producer himself, and his suggestions as to scenery and cos tumes are considered invaluable.

He may be a typical American, but in his German army uniform, which he wears in "Under Royal Patronage," Francis Bushman is simply stunning, and there are those who think he should change his nationality. But in spite of all temptations he still remains a true loval-hearted

METERS SAVE WATER.

Supply Conduit.

Since the advent of the water meter in Washington, a great saving in the small asphalt plant installed by supply of water has been noted. W. A. McFariand, superintendent of the water department of the District, in a statement issued yesterday said the success of meters in decreasing the waste of water had practically deferred the need for a second supply conduit.

The small asphalt plant installed by the District government two years ago, at a cost of $2.300, saved the District a large amount on its street repair billiously below the plant of C. B. Hunt, engineer of highways, submitted to the Commissioners yesterday.

This saving demonstrates the economy.
